

Assignment 3 was an interesting project. I had no problems doing anything.

Although I did not have any problems programming the method implementations, I encountered some other problems, namely being that I could not get FX to work, so I had to rely on driver classes to verify my code. The most annoying highlight was when the FX install caused eclipse to not open, so I had to spend time figuring out how to fix it.

Overall, although it was nothing new, it was still good practice. I will definitely spend more time installing the necessary kits in the future, and maybe even trying to get a grip on how they work so that I can use them on my own future projects.
